Local Knowledge & History:

Early mention of the place that came to be known as Bonnybridge (Scottish Gaelic): Drochaid a ' Bhuinne; Scots: Bonniebrig is situated near the 'Bonny Water' which runs through the town. It was also known as Ford of Bonny (Fuirid of Bonny 1648). The part of the village on the south side of the River Bonny was also known as Bonny Water whilst the part on the north side was called Water of Bonny. This lies just north of the Forth & Clyde Canal known by the locals as simply 'The Canal'. This runs from the River Carron at Grangemouth to the River Clyde at Bowling. The canal opened in 1790 providing a route across Scotland for seagoing vessels and closed in the mid 1960s. The earliest record for the modern name comes from 1682 when it appears as Bonniebridge which may give an indication of the period in which the first bridge was built.
